Take 425 Bodies From Ruins, Toll Now Set at 500

By the Associated Press

New London, Texas, March 19—Horror of the nation's worst school disaster mounted today as tangled wreckage of the London Consolidated School yielded scores more of crushed bodies. The known dead reached hundreds.

Walter Elliott, Texas highway patrol captain, reported to his Austin headquarters that the death toll would be 500, including 17 teachers, in the explosion-demolished luxurious school, built by oil wealth of the vast East Texas fields and wrecked yesterday by a blast believed to have been caused by seeping gas from those same fields.

Some estimates of the ultimate death toll still ranged above 600, however.

Elliott added that order was restored to the stricken community, where Governor James V. Allred declared martial law last night after inrushing sightseers and rescuer workers, mingling with frenzied parents, brought about chaotic conditions.

HACK DEBRIS TO GET DEAD

Laborers late today ceased digging into the ruins and wearily said: "The job is finished."

A total of 425 bodies had then been removed from the pile of debris.

This death toll did not include those victims who have died after being taken, injured, from the ruins. This number is still undetermined.

Acetylene torches, cutting the twisted steel beams of the massive building, tugging cranes and bare hands worked together in uncovering the bodies.

Nurses in an emergency hospital set up immediately in the rear of the building revealed they were rushing preparations to care for "about 75 more bodies" expected to be exhumed from the basement of the south wing.

Production Superintendent H. S. McGarry of the Humble Oil & Refinery Co., estimated at 9 a. m. that 450 bodies had been identified and added he was confident "there are others still unidentified—26, I understand."

Several of the injured died in hospitals.

Directed by President Roosevelt to "render every assistance in this shocking tragedy," Albert Evans, Red Cross disaster director, was flying here this morning from St. Louis. He was relied upon to organize relief work.

President Roosevelt also asked government agencies to assist in the relief work.

Major oil company executives and Overton city officials were ready to meet with Evans to delve into probable causes of the shocking tragedy that virtually wiped out the rich oil sector's younger generation.

6000 Auto Sitters Ordered Arrested By Detroit Judge

Detroit, March 19 (AP)—Orders for arrest of 6,000 sit-down strikers occupying plant Chrysler automobile plants in defiance of an injunction were delivered today to Sheriff Thomas C. Wilcox deputies.

Governor Frank Murphy, who refused last month to order National Guardsmen to eject strikers from General Motors plants at Flint, Mich., under similar circumstances, withheld comment on the writs of attachment issued today by Circuit Judge Allan Campbell.

Chief Deputy Sheriff Bernard McGrath said, "It's up to the Governor. There is nothing we can do. We haven't the manpower."

The strikers who have held the Chrysler plants since March 8 in an attempt to enforce a demand for the United Automobile Workers of America, accepted news of

3 Bandits Seize $3300 in Allston

Apparently having waited for a $3300 payroll to be delivered at the Oxford Print offices, 881 Commonwealth avenue, Allston, three bandits held up officers and employes of the company this afternoon and stole the money.

The bandits, all of them armed and two of them wearing knitted stocking caps pulled low over their faces, fled in a sedan which had been parked outside with a fourth man at the wheel.

The sedan was one reported last Tuesday by the owner, Henry A. Nutting of West Berlin, as having been stolen on the Roxbury Crossing police division.

ASKED FOR TREASURER

Less than ten minutes after the payroll had been delivered to the publishing company offices by the crew of an armored truck, a man entered the outer office and asked for William H. Perry, the treasurer.

He was directed to Perry's office, and as he started for this office, two more men followed. All three then drew revolvers.

One of the bandits quickly crossed over to the switchboard, displayed the revolver and snarled at the operator:

"Put up your hands and don't yell, or you'll get what's in this gun."

He ordered the operator, Mrs. Marcel Wayland of Somerville, into the office of Traffic Manager Archibald Porter of Brookline, and lined up both Mrs. Wayland and Porter, with their faces toward the wall. Another employe came in and he, too, was ordered to the wall.

TOLD TO OPEN SAFE

Meanwhile two other bandits had rounded up President F. E. Porter and had taken him at gunpoint into the office of Treasurer Perry, who lives in Hammondswood road, Chestnut Hill. Perry was ordered to open the safe.

The treasurer pretended to be having difficulty in manipulating the safe dials, but a threat that "stalling" would mean his life hastened his fingers.

After obtaining the payroll, the three bandits rejoined their companion in the car and roared away along Commonwealth avenue, past Commonwealth Armory and toward Brighton.

Sharing in the good fortune of the Wellesley woman is a New Haven, Ct., ticketholder who gave the name of "J. Bowes and Another." He, too, had drawn Royal Mail.

Wally's Divorce O. K.'d by Court

By DAVID P. SENTNER
International News Service Staff Correspondent

London, March 19—The royal road to romance for Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson and the Duke of Windsor was cleared of all obstacles today when the London divorce court threw out an application to block the Baltimore beauty's divorce on grounds of collusion.

Sir Boyd Merriman, president of the divorce court, announced his decision after Francis Stevenson, a Londoner who filed an intervention in the case last December, made known his willingness to drop the proceeding.

The action means that Mrs. Simpson and former King Edward VIII of England may marry at any date after April 27, when the divorce decree nisi she obtained last October at Ipswich assizes becomes final and absolute.

Today's hearing in the ancient law courts where the strand runs into Fleet street, London's newspaper row, was held on a technicality.

Stevenson, an elderly, bespectacled man of medium height, with a fresh complexion and thin grey hair, had informed the King's proctor months ago he had dropped the action following Edward's abdication.

He said he had filed it merely as a result of rumor and press report and that he had no desire to continue with his single-handed effort to block one of history's great romances.

"At the time," Stevenson said,

80,000 WORKERS GRANTED 10 PER CENT PAY RAISE

On the eve of John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization drive to bring the textile industry here under its banner, the New England textile industry today granted 10 per cent wage increases to approximately 80,000 of its 350,000 employes.

As Lewis' organizing group for the textile industry conferred in New York, announcements of wage increases in all the New England states followed in rapid succession.

James Austin, home office president of the Stevens Mills, commented, Saul Edward L. Temme, secretary of the Fall River United Textile Workers Council:

"My personal opinion is that it is quite apparent that the 10 per cent increase in wages is a suspicious move to lull, in some way, the workers to sleep.

"The work of the textile workers organizing committee is gathering momentum and the complete organization of the whole textile industry will soon be an accomplished fact.

"The workers will not be fooled by this move to forestall the real benefits and constructive program of the CIO."

NEW WALKOUTS HIT CHICAGO

Chicago, March 19 (AP)—Walkouts, lockouts and sit-downs surged over Chicago's business and industrial districts today with numerous acts of violence reported.

A police threat to "shoot on the drivers' union" if violence continues in the taxi strike was made by Acting Commissioner John Prendergast.

Two hundred extra police armed with night clubs, and shotguns, ranged through the downtown district to prevent a recurrence of Wednesday's rioting.

Several cases were overturned, the violence did not reach the proportions of Wednesday's riots.

Clothing of women was ripped from shreds when a noonday brake-on the Stolz And Irene Bedwear Inc. 150 workers have been on strike since Monday. Violence flared when 200 striking workers were compelled to prevent customers from entering the place.

Police loaded 50 of the kicking, screaming women into five patrol wagons and took them to the station.

On the opposite side of the city, strikers broke out in the strike of the employees of the Stewart Die Casting Company. A mob hurled bricks and seven metal inks that forced 5 truckload scabs who had continued running for the company.

The strikes rapidly were gaining momentum throughout the city's industrial area with full blast of more than offset by the new strikes.

Roxbury Girl Held For Grand Jury in Attack on Mother

Twenty-year-old Frances Finkel of Hunting street, Roxbury, accused of the attempted killing of her mother last January, was held in $500 for the grand jury today by Judge Albert P. Hayden in Roxbury court.

She was charged with attack with intent to murder her mother, Mrs. Sarah Finkel, at Biker Cholim Hospital in Roxbury. At the time, she tried to kill herself, police charge, by swallowing some of the same poison she allegedly administered to the mother.

Late yesterday afternoon, on the eve of her court appearance, the young girl was found unconscious in a chair at her home. Gas was pouring from an open jet in the kitchen stove.

A neighbor who smelled the gas broke into the apartment and his speedy action saved her from probable death. She told police that it was an accident.

Eight Lectures On Stenography

Commissioner of Education James G. Reardon has announced the State University Extension Division will open a preparatory class for the coming Federal stenographic examination, beginning Tuesday evening, March 23, at 7:30 p. m., at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Frederick L. Carney, of the Boston school department, and University Extension instructor in clerical subjects for a number of years, will give the entire course of eight lectures.

Police in New York got a real taste of a woman's fury aroused when they dragged Molly Hirsh from the Woolworth five-and-ten-cent store on 14th street where they evicted and arrested 59 sit-down strikers. All were charged with disorderly conduct.

5 AND 10 'SIT-DOWNS' OUTWIT POLICE

New York, March 19 (AP)—Posing as customers, 44 girl sit-down strikers who previously had been ousted from six F. W. Woolworth stores in West 14th street renewed their "inside stay" today despite a protective cordon of 40 private guards and police.

Outside the store, eight men pickets were on duty. They were rounded off to police headquarters when they attempted mass picketing.

The girl strikers entered the 5 and 10-cent establishment unheeded in small groups after non-strikers had taken over their posts this morning.

Once inside, they immediately deployed to the departments where they formerly worked and patiently resumed their sit-down on the selling side of the counter.

CHILLY STARES

To the police query, "Is there anything I can show you?" the sit-downers returned chill stares.

Thirty police guarded the outside of the store, while ten uniformed private detectives stood watch inside as the returned sit-downers with elbows spread, did their best to block off the aisle counters from prospective customers.

The strikers had been forcibly removed last night when police, by dint of much pulling and hauling, herded 44 sidesprits and 15 men employes into patrol wagons and took them to jail. They were released to answer charges of disorderly conduct March 26.

SURPRISE RAID

It was the second Woolworth store which police had cleared within 18 hours. They herded 17 employes of a Brooklyn store into a cordon in a surprise raid while the sit-downers slept.

On order of Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine, the policemen last night left their nightsticks at the stationhouse.

The specific charge against the Brooklyn sit-downers was creating a fire hazard by sleeping on improvised beds on the floor. A second charge against those in Manhattan was that of conspiracy to interfere with company business. Only two Woolworth stores, out of 125 in the city, were affected.

Thumbing Via Law

Waterloo, Ia., March 19 (AP)—Hitch-hikers eager to promote "welfare of the individual who seeks free transportation" have filed articles of incorporation with the county treasurer.

The articles say the corporation has "perpetual succession," can hold real estate, and "sue or be sued."

JUDGE ORDERS 6000 ARRESTED IN AUTO 'SIT'

the order for their arrest calmly.

One striker in the Chrysler-Jefferson plant, referring to court action on behalf of Detroit's numerous sit-downs said:

"They had 106 men in the Newton Packing plant and the Judge said to arrest them but nothing happened. If they can't throw 106 out, how can they throw us out? We're fighting for our jobs now, and the U. A. W. A. too."

Sheriff James C. Wilcox said he would make no attempt at ejection of the strikers until he obtains additional deputies or the assistance of the National Guard.

"I will serve any writ if I have enough men. I can't do it with my present staff. I have asked the court for 600 special deputies to eject the Newton Packing Co. strikers. If I get the deputies I will act immediately, on the Newton or the Chrysler cases."

The eight captive Chrysler plants were guarded by augmented picket lines. Members of the "union patrol" and a "flying patrol" of automobiles were prepared to reassemble the 20,000 strike sympathizers who put on a "show of strength" at the striker-held plants Wednesday morning.

Judge Campbell filed a separate order for each plant, each based upon an affidavit stating that the injunction had been violated.

Attorney Thomas F. Chawke said that, since the original complaint charged conspiracy, any person who was a party to the occupation of the plant, including those who prepared or delivered food for the strikers, could be arrested on the writs.

CLEAR PLANTS

Asked if he meant that Homer Martin, president of the U. A. W. A. and other high officials of the union, and of the Committee for Industrial Organization were liable to arrest on the writs, Chawke replied:

"That could be done, but our primary object now is to get the men out of the plants."

Mystery shrouded a fire reported to have burned for several hours early today in a tunnel at the main Dodge plant of the corporation in Hamtramck, where 2,000 sit-downers have remained since March 8.

Members of the United Automobile Workers of America who guarded the factory gates throughout the night and the office of the Dodge local of the union denied there had been a fire, as did a patrolman on the beat.

But the Hamtramck and Highland Park fire departments said there had been a fire confined to the tunnel and invisible from outside the Dodge grounds. Highland Park fire headquarters said it sent one company to assist Hamtramck's three.

News cameramen and reporters who hurried to the plant could find no fire fighting apparatus in the vicinity at the very moment that the Hamtramck department said it still had one company there and the blaze was under control.

John Griffin, Hamtramck fire chief, was reported to have been overcome by smoke. At St. Francis Hospital it was learned he had been taken there, but attendants said they could give no report on his injury or condition.

FARLEY HINTED

Governor Frank Murphy conferred last night with R. T. Keller, president of Chrysler, and E. E. Hutchinson, finance chairman. Earlier he had spent two hours with Homer Martin, U. A. W. A. president, and Richard T. Frankensteen, organizational director. He declined to discuss his conversations with either group.

The governor signified his willingness to participate in a conference if Walter P. Chrysler, chairman of the board, and John L. Lewis, head of the Committee for Industrial Organization, which is supporting the U. A. W. A. strike, are brought together.

Reports that such a meeting might be arranged have been current, but Governor Murphy said he had no announcement to make on the subject.

Remington-Rand Peace Pact Signed

Washington, March 19 (US)—A settlement of the ten-month feud between Remington-Rand, Inc., and 4000 "locked-out" strikers, was reached here between company officials and American Federation of Labor heads.

The agreement—terms of which were not made public—was attained after lengthy sessions between company President James H. Rand, Jr., and President William Green of the AFL, in the office of Secretary of Labor Perkins.

The tentative "adjustment," it was agreed, will be submitted immediately to Rand's board of directors, and to employe representatives for formal ratification, upon which it will become binding. A joint statement explained:

"It was mutually agreed that the terms of the adjustment would be first presented to the employes and to the directors of the company before being made public."

Transfusion for Doomed Boy

Losing Hope for Johnny

NEW BLOOD GIVES NEW LIFE

By BETTY DI PESA

A gallant gesture was made today by James Fitzgerald, Cambridge fireman, who gave nearly a pint of his blood to little John McMahon, 3, doomed to death by the weird malady known as lymphatic leukaemia.

At Cambridge City Hospital, physicians admitted that six months was the longest span the youngster may live. The transfusion, performed at 10:30 a. m. today, chilled the boy and helped to stem—momentarily—the fast reproductive power of white cells.

Normally, the boy should have seven. He has 195,000 at present. The transfusion was made by Dr. David F. Mahoney.

Mrs. Mary McMahon, the mother, of Lopez street, Cambridge, was on hand to witness the transfusion. At home, lucky also today, the Boston Evening American reporter ate didn't have much hope for Johnny.

Putting a knife to another arm, the size of which would fit a three-year-old boy, Mrs. McMahon, mother of seven fatherless children, held back her tears and said:

"The suit belongs to Johnny, but I don't suppose he'll be using it any longer."

FAMILY IN DIRE STRAITS

I found the family in dire straits. Johnny's father, a rubber worker, died two years ago and now the family is forced to depend upon welfare aid. Seven months to feed now—depending on relief.

"You know the doctors told me, when this disease came so suddenly and mysteriously upon Johnny, that I should feed him fresh fruits and special foods with iron in them," she told this reporter.

"But it's hard to get those things on $20 a week with eight mouths to fill," she answered herself.

"There isn't much you can do on $20. I try to keep up an insurance policy on each of the children, a few cents a week."

She was waiting for his two other children, ranging in age from five to 12 years, to return home from school after the operation. James, 12; Catherine, 10, Rose, 8, Josephine, 6; Neil, 7, and Bob, 5.

After their brother had undergone the operation, they had planned to go to Saint Johns, but haven't planned a day trip since. Today they were to have gone to Revere beach

THE BRIGHTER SIDE

By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright, 1937, by King Features Syndicate, Inc., International and All Other Rights Reserved.)

Some of the cops in New York City have been getting tangled up with loan sharks.

So Mr. Valentine, the head of the big town police department, has dug up a bankroll of $250,000 to lend to the cops at a low rate of interest, and keep them out of the maws of the sharks.

Damon Runyon

It seems that the sharks have been charging the cops as high as 300 per cent on the money advanced. This rate of interest does not surprise us, however, is that the cops did not take out their jacks, and dent a few saurious skulls.

We presume that the cops felt that in view of the fact they are sworn to preserve the peace, such a course would have produced a distinct violation of their oath. The outcast of the loan sharks suffering their skulls dented might have been construed by some officers as disturbances of the peace.

It all depends, we think, upon when and where the skull-denting took place.

In a residential neighborhood, at dead o'night, when law-abiding ladies and gentlemen are slumbering, the screams of the sharks might, indeed, be inimical to the best interests of the public peace.

A Popular Move

But if the cops escorted the sharks to the corner of Fifth avenue and 42nd street at high noon, and made practically unanimous that they were about to do a lot of off-hand denting of skulls out of which had come items of 300 per cent interest on money loaned, we guarantee a vast multitude would look on admiringly, uttering such cries as:

"Three cheers for the cops!"

And we are here to tell you that it takes a deed of surpassing merit to rouse a New York multitude to cheer the cops.

The loan shark is a mean man, to speak.

If he is not the meanest man in the world, he is so close to it that it will take the camera eye to decide the finish.

We differentiate, of course, between the shark, and the man who lends money at a fair and legal rate of interest. There are many of these men.

They are not sharks. As a matter of fact, they are benefactors to the chap who needs money in a great hurry, and has no other way of getting it than by borrowing, perhaps against his salary.

Helper in Need

"Neither a borrower nor a lender be" is excellent doctrine, but it takes no account of sudden sickness, or death, or other calamity that sometimes catches a fellow with his financial suspenders down. In such emergency, the money lender who does not ask your right eye for security, can be a blessing.

Unfortunately, it is the loan shark who frequently grabs the poor fish of this nature.

The loan shark is the usurer. The tiger of the human sea, who preys on human misfortune and misery. He is the man who charges up to the 300 per cent that the New York cops encountered.

And the unhappy feature of the thing is that the loan shark is often enabled to skulk about his nefarious business behind the inadequacies of the law. If the loan shark had a conscience, he would hang himself.

But of course if he had a conscience, he would not be a loan shark in the first instance. He would prefer burglary. It is much more genteel.

The loan shark is an ancient institution.

We do not know how far back he goes. But it is conceivable that when Father Adam and Mother Eve decided they wanted some nice classy fig leaves, Father A. had to go to the local loan shark and borrow the money to buy the leaves.

Bible Serpent

Maybe the serpent is the Old Story's allegory of the loan shark. In that event, this at least identifies the serpent beyond any doubt. It was a cotton-mouth moccasin.

And yet we knew a lot of loan sharks of kindly instinct when we were knocking around the West back down the years. Only we did not call them loan sharks in those days. We called them "Easy Money Men."

It was easy to get money from them by signing a lien against your salary at interest beginning at 10 per cent, as we remember, and compounding until it got to some utterly fantastic figure. It would get so fantastic that the easy money men were bashful about pursuing collections themselves, which proves their kindly instinct.

These easy money men nearly all employed a lady who was known as a "bawler out."

She had to be a lady of sound larynx, big gall, and extensive vocabulary. Her looks were unimportant, though if she was stout the size of a first baseman, it helped.

It was the "bawler out's" function to appear at the place of employment of a delinquent on the books of the easy money men, and, in the presence of as large an audience as possible, "bawl out" the unhappy delinquent in a loud tone of voice, and sometimes in languages wholly unfit for publication.

Effective Drive

This proceeding was supposed to spur the delinquent to practically frantic effort to catch up with the easy money books, and generally it succeeded, for the "bawler out" would be certain to repeat her visit in the event of further delinquency.

We knew one of these "bawler outs" well when we were a police reporter in Denver. She used to come down to the reporters' room at the city hall every week to "bawl out" a pal of ours. We used to hide in a saloon a block away when we saw her coming, but we could always hear what she said to our pal.

He never ran away from her. He just sat and listened to her "bawling out." He must have enjoyed it, for after she had called on him once a week for eight months' hand running, he married her.

She has kept on giving him a regular "bawling out" ever since.

LAST OBSTACLE TAKEN FROM WALLY'S PATH

"I thought I was doing my duty. Now I think it is my duty to drop it."

The King's proctor, however, felt obliged to ask Sir Boyd Merriman whether it would be proper to proceed with granting of an absolute decree, in view of the fact Stevenson had dropped his action for seemingly "irrelevant" reasons.

In this connection, Sir Donald disclosed that the King's proctor personally had interviewed Stevenson and questioned him regarding his charges the suit was a collusive one and that "there had been consideration on the part of petitioner which, unless the court exercised discretion in her favor, disentitled her to the relief she sought."

HAD NO EVIDENCE

The interview, however, disclosed Stevenson had no evidence of any sort to support his allegations and that they were based on rumors which he had heard from friends and hints which he had seen in the press.

Appearing for the King's proctor, Sir Donald Somervell, attorney general, told the court Stevenson's complaint that he decree nisi had been sifted to the bottom and no grounds whatever found to substantiate the charge.

In this connection, he stated that despite all allegations to this effect no pressure had been brought upon him either to expedite the divorce or block it irregularities.

The Simpson divorce case, he said, had been treated no differently than any other.

Lest prior to Stevenson's appearance, Sir Donald said, the King's proctor realized there were circumstances which in his view made a proper case for investigation.

As a consequence, the proctor inquired thoroughly into the case and Norman Ince, Pirotta, whether the case had been arranged or was a collusive one, secondly, whether the petitioner was necessary to be removed at misconduct of respondent, and, thirdly, whether there was anything material on the part of the petitioner which made the court exercised discretion in her favor and barred her from divorce.

"As a result of the proctor's investigation," Somervell said, "there was no evidence which would justify me in directing intervention."

When Somervell had finished, Stevenson stood up in court and announced adherence to his intention to withdraw the complaint. He said he would consent to any order of the court.

ACTION DROPPED

Justice Bucknill promptly struck the intervention off the records save Mrs. Simpson a clean bill of health and in effect cleared the path for the marriage for which a king renounced his throne and father's faith.

Sir Donald Somervell, attorney general who represented the king's proctor, in the Simpson case, disclosed that on December 9, 1936, the day before King Edward abdicated and on the eve of the decree nisi "Mr. Stevenson" had intervened in the divorce.

Stevenson, the attorney general said, accused the principals in the divorce case of collusion and withholding of material facts.

Sir Donald informed Sir Boyd Merriman, president of the court, he understood the decree nisi pronounced Mrs. Simpson at Ipswich last October 27 could not be made absolute so long as the intervening Stevenson remains on file.

"On December 9, 1936," Sir Donald said, "a Mr. Stevenson intervened and alleged in his notice of appeal that he proposed to show cause why the decree nisi should not be made absolute by reason of material facts not having been brought before the court and/or by reason of the decree being obtained by collusion."

The attorney general flatly denied any pressure had been brought to bear upon the King's proctor to prevent investigation of the charges, as alleged in numerous letters received by him.

"Notice of appearance was given by Mr. Stevenson to petitioner's solicitor on December 10," Sir Donald continued. "No further step was taken in this intervention by Mr. Stevenson except that on December 14 he gave notice by letter to petitioner's solicitor that it was not his intention to file an affidavit or proceed further with this matter.

"But as I understand it, having regard to Rule 56, the decree nisi cannot be made absolute so long as an appearance entered by an intervenor remains on the file."

Opening his address, Somervell said he appeared with W. Morrison on behalf of the King's proctor and then proceeded to relate history of the present decree.

"It was obtained," he said, "on the grounds of misconduct by respondent with a woman described in the petition as Mrs. E. H. Kennedy at the Hotel de Paris at Bray on July 21, 22 and 23, 1936."

CORESPONDENT REVEALED

This was the first time the name of the correspondent in the famous divorce case had been made public.

"On January 19," Somervell continued, "your Lordship directed the King's proctor that notice should be drawn to the intervention and requested that it should be investigated.

"I would like, if I may, to read a letter the King's proctor received from the senior registrar which is the basis on which I appear here this morning.

"The King's proctor said he received a number of letters urging or suggesting that pressure be brought there that the attorney-general should refrain from having the case investigated.

"There is no truth in either of these allegations. No pressure at any time or from any source has been attempted to prevent investigation or any action I may think proper.

"Results of the King's proctors inquiries on all aspects of the case was that no evidence to justify the attorney-general directing intervention was found."

Every line of inquiry was followed up, he said, to see whether there was any evidence which might be brought to notice of the court.

No Word of London Action Reached Wally

Monts, France, March 19 (AP)—Driving and walking are Wallis Warfield Simpson's favorite pastimes at his new forest retreat, the Chateau de Cande, since the castle gate course is still too rain-soaked for play.

Apart from her walks, there is little variety in Mrs. Simpson's daily life as she awaits her final decree of divorce so she can wed the man who renounced the British throne for her.

She declared today she knew nothing of action taken by the King's proctor in London, asking the president of the divorce court for "instructions," reportedly to spend the final decree.

"It's all a big mystery," Herman L. Rogers, her spokesman said. "Nobody has told her and we have no idea what it's all about."

Mrs. Simpson's only venture from the chateau grounds since arriving March 9 was a trip to Tours to see the sights of the former royal city.

Her walks usually are taken in the afternoon. She arises about noon, when a maid puts the finishing touches on her toilet and has on one of her simply-cut navy blue dresses.

Her Riviera hostess, Mrs. Herman L. Rogers, is usually waiting for her in the magnificent library, and Mrs. Simpson always has an affectionate greeting for "Catherine," her friend of many years.

Time hangs heavy for the chateau residents in the evening spent usually around a library fire writing letters or listening to the electric organ.

Mrs. Simpson is fond of music and sometimes plays the piano in the small salon.

It is understood the Duke of Windsor telephones once, sometimes twice, every day. Frequently the calls come during the hours just after midnight, for the Duke of Duchess likes to retire late.

Presidential Taste Runs to Fried Chicken

Reaching for another helping of fried chicken, Southern fried, if you please, President Roosevelt betrays one of his favorite weaknesses. The President and his party were guests at an old-fashioned barbecue given by the Warm Springs, Ga., Chamber of Commerce, in the mess hall of an abandoned CCC camp. After the feast the President dedicated a new Negro school, the Eleanor Roosevelt, named in honor of his wife.

DEAL BENEFITS TO SOUTH TOLD BY ROOSEVELT

By PHILIP PEARL

Warm Springs, Ga., March 19 (UP)—President Roosevelt delivered his favorite lesson in economics before an audience of his Warm Springs neighbors gathered for the dedication of a new Negro school.

Using the experience of this small community as an example, the President said:

"We began thinking of our economic problems as a national picture. The South was starving on 5-cent cotton. We couldn't build schools or pay teachers on that. We couldn't do it on 7c cents a day labor.

"Compare conditions in Warm Springs this year with what they were before the depression. Why, they're infinitely better.

"But we have go to raise our economic standards away higher than they are today. If we could only do something to stabilize what people get for work—stabilize it on a higher level."

The President said he hi learned his first economic lesso in Warm Springs 14 years ago. I studying the community's nee its basic problem, he declared, w lack of purchasing power.

The South has a "long, long w to go" to fill its educational nee, he asserted. "Mother knowing" is even more important than m book knowledge, he said.

The school for Negro childr was the 525th built in the So with the aid of the Julius Ros wald Fund. The Works Progr Administration also contributed. It was named the Eleanor Roo velt School in honor of the Pre dent's wife. Mr. Roosevelt said girls are pupils at Wellesley High School.

"She asked me to tell y she's tremendously grateful y the honor."

A Boston Evening American reporter took "Peggy" out to South Station to her surprise when the news came flashing through—and what a greeting it was!

PLANS TO QUIT JOB

Between smiles and tears of joy, mother and daughter couldn't seem to make up their minds what to do or say, but finally Mrs. Johnson told the story.

"God has been good to me," she exclaimed. "I bought the ticket by accident and I lost it almost the same way. Times have been hard for us the last few years, too. That's why I'm back at the work I left 25 years ago. But I'll stop now.

"A friend of mine who needed help at a big dinner is partly responsible. She asked me if I wanted a few hours' work. I took it and was just about to go home when one of the other girls coaxed me into buying the sweepstake ticket.

"I told her I'd been buying them for ten years and never won a penny, but I bought it. And then, last night, a man from New York called me up and offered me $15,000 for my ticket. If it hadn't been for my husband I'd have sold it.

"I couldn't sleep all night thinking of the storms and wondering if I shouldn't have taken it. Well . . ."

ALL GOING TO IRELAND

And Mrs. Johnson had to pause for breath. Then she explained what she planned immediately.

"We'll all take a trip to Ireland. I'll give neither or me job and get through next week. I'll get the money to Bobbie and visit my brother and his wife and their six children at Athlone. I expect I'll give them a bit of a present.

"I'll give my Aunt Mollie—Mrs. Cormick's her name—some of the money, too. She lives in Tipperary. Then we'll bank most of the rest. Skysters and smart-ies don't need to come around trying to get any of it either. I'll take care of them if they do."

With all of the Gaelic fervor of dozens of Gaelic greeting heroes there were, mingled with the tears of joy, Mrs. Johnson's third sentence—the first to mention money—the words "I'll be able to . . ."

"We're rich, mother—we're rich!" And just as though Mrs. Katherine Johnson didn't realize it, after winning the $150,000 Irish Sweepstakes prize on Royal Mail's victory in the Grand National, 18-year-old Peggy gives mother another hug and a kiss. Mrs. Johnson, who is 51, and has another girl and two boys, is the wife of Charles Johnson, a night watchman in Wellesley. She almost sold her ticket—but didn't. Now she's going to take the family for a trip to Ireland.

HORROR OF TEXAS TRAGEDY INCREASES EACH HOUR

Workmen dropped out at intervals after 19 steady hours of boring into ruins of a $250,000 structure that was proclaimed "the world's wealthiest rural school."

Work stopped in the fields, largest petroleum sector in the world, and other schools were closed tight.

AFTER NIGHT OF HORROR

Dismal, drizzling dawn found New London adults red eyed in grief. Only tiny tots had slept.

An information clearing agency was established at the Overton city hall. There anxious kin gave descriptions of their youngsters.

"My Bobby was wearing a brown shirt, cordaroy pants and brown shoes. He was such a little boy. Weighed about 110 pounds," said one frantic mother.

Two or three minutes later the mother swooned when informed he was alive in a Tyler hospital.

Telegrams of condolence piled high in telegraph offices. Kin and friends of the dead packed the little office and scribbled death messages to all corners of the nation.

Telephones were in constant use. Voices were heard.

"We have found Mary, mother, no I don't think she suffered much. Her face had sort of a smile on it."

"Can you come tomorrow, Tom? They haven't found the boy yet."

PEER AT LITTLE BODIES

Thousands stood silently in a vast semi-circle around the shattered building. Occasionally workers would pause while a tiny body was lifted from beneath brick and steel. Stretchers were there and parents surged forward to peer at the form.

Cause of the blast was sought as one official advanced the theory of gas accumulating in the building from the nearby East Texas oil fields, one of the world's richest. Oil derricks are on the campus.

There were 500 students and 40 teachers in the two-story school, unit of $1,000,000 block of educational structures when an explosion more than 1000 men from the oil fields attacked the wreckage. The two, notables understood, collapsed in each other's arms under a pyramiding arch formed by falling debris.

A woman teacher was removed alive but injured, after being buried nearly 24 hours.

Frantic mothers and fathers spent last night speeding by motor cars from home to hospital and back to find their children in the morgue, a depot converted into morgue.

DIG FOR THEIR DEAD

Oil field workers, like workers in the Pennsylvania coal fields, joined the army of rescuers at once. Dense smoke rolled skyward, and mingled in an inky tower over those who dug.

Workers stood on their knees into an almost impregnable mass of coke. Axes, for torpedoing, echoed near the unlucky from a powerful public address system. Sirens, warning of the explosion, stopped to be wailed, shrieked out of dust hands far from any thing pumped from the earth.

Here, of all, more particularly, [illegible] structure, the [illegible] were spent of the dwindled [illegible].

Efforts were concentrated at the site of the auditorium, where most of the 500 high school students were gathered when the walls and roof had so completely collapsed back with crushing force upon the collapsing structure. Hundreds of grade students already had been dismissed from the main building. Churches, schools and hospitals for miles around were crowded with the dead and injured.

PRESIDENT SPEEDS AID

At Warm Springs, Ga., President Roosevelt, agitated by the news urged the Red Cross "and all of the government agencies" to speed aid.

National Guardsmen, under marshal law orders from Gov. James V. Allred, patrolled the [illegible] streets.

"This is the worst I have ever known," said Joe Davidson, 54-year-old World War aviator who twice experienced having an plane shot out from under him. Three of his four children perished.

"Kids were blown out through the top on to the road," said 15-year-old Martha Harris, who witnessed the explosion from the Home Economy Building 50 yards away.

"Some of them hung up there and others fell off to the ground . . . I saw a girl fall out of the top down through a big window which opened to the outside. The glass cut her leg off just like a knife would."

FINDING MANGLED DEAD

The force of the blast, which hurled bricks a quarter of a mile and was heard nearly three miles away, was terrific.

"No ordinary blast could have ever wrecked completely the high school building at New London," said T. Fay Ainsworth of Houston, architect of the firm which designed it.

"The building was one of the finest school structures architecturally, anywhere in the United States."

It had a steel framework and steel trusses in the roof.

American Legion officials at Overton said several sticks of dynamite used for blasting a football field, were found in the wreckage but had no connection with the explosion. The sticks were in a part of the school not badly damaged.

As flames from gas jets, leaping 30 feet into the air, lighted the scene, screaming erazed lifted huge chunks of concrete and scattered torches to ruin twisted steel to rescue laborers digging frantically.

THE HORROR OF IT ALL

One recognizing mother snatched at a hand with two rings on it, found yards from the building. She cried and turned away.

Mrs. W. H. Phillips' 5-year-old son had run ahead to meet his brother and sister at school. He was killed with them.

R. K. Carll, oil firm employer, was one of the first to reach the scene after the explosion. He pulled out the body of his daughter.

At 2:30 p. m. the death blast came. The scene is a campus and a section of the school of Henderson on which seven pendening oil wells are reminiful of the source of wealth.

"My brother said the place just blew up all of a sudden and scared them awfully," was the simple picture presented by little Martha Harris.

THE HORROR OF IT ALL

Warm Springs, Ga., March 19 (NEA)—The appalling school disaster at New London, Texas, catapulted President Roosevelt's attention here today as he kept wires open to Washington and the seat of the tragedy ascertaining the horrifying extent of its death toll.

The Red Cross and all government agencies were under orders from Warm Springs to do everything possible to aid the Texas community in its hour of tragedy.

Bulletins were relayed to the President as fast as they came in.

When word of the explosion and its shocking death toll first reached Warm Springs last evening, the staff that accompanied Mr. Roosevelt here galvanized into action, seeking their own sons and daughters.

In the manner of stevedores, they lined up on the rock and passed debris hand-to-hand to a clearing.

"Blood smeared an upturned brick. With a shout, the workers gathered available shovels and lights and stretchers were called. An arm, a head appeared—terribly crushed. In a few minutes it was on the stretcher, carried to a waiting ambulance and speeded to the nearest temporary morgue.

"The scene was repeated over an dover. Finally the worst of the shock was over and the men and families settled down to a quiet, organized effort to get out the bodies as quickly as possible—not actually in the hopes of life, but to make certain relatives would be spared the anguish of ignorance of their children's fate—which the rescuers knew too well.

"A pitiful silent mother held a child in her arms. He had been pulled from the wreckage minutes earlier. Quietly she waited for another to be found."

LINE OF THE DEAD

All one line, 102 lay bodies were stretched out in a line on a hilltop awaiting transfer to morgues. Another line of the was nearby.

Narrow escapes were numerous. Bricks rained down around Miss Christine Beasley, but she was uninjured. Evyn Peters was blown through a window—only to suffer a foot wound when she landed on a protruding nail.

J. B. Nelson, Jr., an oil company employe, who was in the building, saw 26 children buried under collapsing book shelves.

Governor Allred said National Guard officers and the secretary of state would set up a court of inquiry to investigate the disaster.

In some cases the bodies were so unrecognizable that parents disputed possession. Fingerprint experts were hastened here, many prints of children having been made the visitors at last year's Texas Centennial and records kept.

TONS THAT CRUSHED LIFE

"There are larger buildings and more high buildings, but none was any better," said Ainsworth of the structure he designed.

The building had an overall dimension of 254 feet long by 146 feet wide. It was two story and of steel frame hollow tile and brick construction, with stone trim.

The auditorium in the roof were plastered. The structure was entirely fireproof and the general control alone of the one building ran $115,000, Ainsworth said.

It was the main one of a group.

The auditorium, where over students were at the time of the blast, was 53 feet wide and 102 feet deep. It had a balcony that seated around 250. The main floor seated 700.

"Undoubtedly the auditorium was full to capacity when the blast occurred, if word from the scene of carnage is correct," Ainsworth commented.

Roosevelt 'Shocked'; Speeds Tragedy Aid

Mr. Roosevelt dictated messages to Admiral Cary T. Grayson, head of the Red Cross, and the chiefs of various federal agencies.

"I am shocked and can only hope that further information will lessen the scope of this tragedy," he stated in newspaperman.

Barring bad weather, President Roosevelt planned to motor 40 miles to Lagrange, Ga., this afternoon to dine with Cason Callaway, biggest cotton ginner of the South.

This call will follow the President's reaffirmation of his belief that both cotton prices and wages must go up and stay up if Dixie is to "be more nearly on the level of other parts of the country."

Teacher's Own Blast Story

Substitute Saves 25 School Pupils

New London, Tex., March 19 (AP)—Don Nelson, 24, oil field worker, temporarily turned classroom supervisor, related today his experiences in the London Consolidated school explosion disaster. His mother, for whom he substituted briefly in a class room, was killed.

"I went to the school a little before 3 o'clock, about 30 minutes before the explosion," he said.

"My mother, Mrs. J. D. Nelson, wished me to take her place for a little while in the elementary school department. I went to the fifth grade room where I was to supervise temporarily 25 youngsters. I don't suppose their ages run more than 10 or 11 years.

"The explosion came without warning. Everything was quiet in my room. I was leaning against a window.

"There was a loud noise. It wasn't deafening, but it was plenty loud. The walls and floor shook. The plaster started falling.

"I am just human, and I thought for a split second of that window. Then two or three of the kids started running toward me. I didn't have another thought but to stick.

HERDS ALL OUT

"While the tumult and roar continued, I had no idea what it was. I herded them ant into the open fast. In less than a minute after the first thunder we were all out.

"My room was the only room so fortunate. Not a child there was injured. Maybe one or two got scratched after we got out. I am not sure about that.

"As soon as we were all out, I ran around the corner of the wall which was still standing and then I began to get an idea of what had happened.

"The first I saw was the rest of the building sprawled out on the ground.

"I saw a child lying twenty yards away. It was dead. Then I saw other bodies in the school yard.

'MISTER, GET ME OUT'

"With two or three other men who rushed up, I went into the ruins.

"The first thing we came upon was a crumpled bookcase, piled over some desks. The space under this protecting bookcase was filled with children.

"There were about ten kids under there. Some we carried out. Some got up, dusted themselves and walked out with unbelievable calmness.

"While we were digging down to them, one little fellow, whose leg was broken, asked to each of us in turn, 'Mister, will you get me out please?'

"'Just a minute, sonny, we're coming,' we replied.

"We were not so fortunate as we went on. We found no more children who could walk away. Some were injured horribly. Most were dead.

'MY MOTHER—KILLED'

"It is one of the most horrible experiences a man can conceive of. I don't care to think about it any more, or to talk about it.

"My mother—I took her place for a few minutes—was killed."

John Nelson, 17, his brother and a high school student, also survived the blast. He related:

"Five of my classmates and my teacher were killed. I'm lucky to be telling you this.

"I was in the manual arts shop in the basement of the building, working on a lathe. My teacher, Mr. L. Butler, was standing about five feet away. I guess there were 15 kids in the room.

"Suddenly, a big mass of sand and what looked like a ball of fire tumbled into the room. Something hit me on the leg. It slit the front of my pants. See. It felt like a 'charley horse' you get playing football.

GETS SISTER OUT

"It knocked me down but I scrambled up and rushed outside. I had a funny sort of feeling; I sat down on the ground.

"I looked up and saw my sister hanging on a window pane. I climbed up and got her down. She was unconscious and bruised.

"I looked in back into the room and found Jack Stripling, unconscious and with a broken ankle. I dragged him across the room and out into the open. They told me later Jack wouldn't live.

"I hurried back into the room. Mr. Butler and five of my friends were dead.

"Back outside I helped them look for bodies for about 15 minutes and then I got sick. They took me home and today I'm in a hospital, getting a serum for possible lockjaw."

Victims Like Rag Dolls, Says Witness

New London, Tex., March 19 (AP)—Eyewitnesses said there was a low rumble, then a loud explosion, and the building seemed to rise up in the air. Then there was a burst of flames and the building fell in on itself and seemingly extinguished the fire.

Victims of the explosion resembled rag dolls with their clothes blown off, Superintendent of Schools W. C. Shaw said.

Undertakers Call Scene of Carnage 'Most Horrible'

Dallas, March 19 (AP)—The most appalling aspects of the London Consolidated School disaster were described today by two Dallas undertakers, who raced for some of the burned bodies of the hundreds of child victims.

"Indescribible is an inadequate word," Jerome Crane said. "We went immediately to the Overton funeral home. There were 25 bodies there. At least 70 of them will never be identified, unless parents are able to do so from remnants of clothing that still remained.

"Barton Beatty and I personally cared for the bodies of 17 children between the ages of 10 and 12. They were the most horribly mangled remains of human beings either of us have ever seen.

"I personally cared for two men and one woman. They were teachers. Their identification may be possible with the mere bulk dismembered remains. All we could do was to embalm and then wrap them in cloths for final disposition."

Crane believed that the injured would be saved by blood.

"It was a case of instant death or actual, almost miraculous, escape," he said.

FOR GREATER FREEDOM FROM COLDS

Just do these 2 things:

1

To help PREVENT many colds

At the first sneeze or sniffle or irritation in the nose—quick! Put a few drops of Vicks Va-tro-nol up each nostril. This specialized medication is expressly designed for the nose and upper throat, and is non-irritating. Used in time, Va-tro-nol helps to prevent many colds—and to throw off head colds in their early stages.

VICKS VA-TRO-NOL

To RELIEVE a cold sooner

Massage Vicks VapoRub briskly on the back between and below the shoulder-blades as well as on the throat and chest, for a full minutes. Then spread a thick layer over the chest. VapoRub's famous poultice-and-vapor action continues hour after hour. It loosens phlegm, eases your cough, relieves irritation, helps to break up local congestion.

VICKS VAPORUB

Sickness from Colds Cut In Half!

The two simple steps outlined above, together with a few sensible health rules, are the basis of Vicks Plan for Better Control of Colds. In the biggest cold-clinic ever held—worn 17,353 people as subjects—Vicks Plan resulted in fewer colds and shorter colds. It cut sickness from colds more than half!

DEAD PUPILS PILED UP IN 6 TEXAS OIL FIELD TOWNS

FRANTIC PARENTS IN VAIN SEARCH FOR CHILDREN

By HAZEL MACDONALD
International News Service Special Correspondent

Overton, Texas, March 19—For 30 miles around here, there was scarcely a child beyond fifth grade age alive today.

Groaning derricks poked into the heaped-up ruins of the finest schoolhouse in Texas' opulent oil district, bringing up crushed little bodies and parts of bodies to confirm estimates that the death list in this worst juvenile disaster in American history will number more than 500.

The children, tossed into the air like so many limp, lifeless dolls by the mysterious blast of yesterday, lie in piles now in improvised morgues at a half-dozen nearby East Texas towns.

When Hope Dies

By order of Gov. James V. Allred, 125 National Guardsmen patrolled the scene and a court of inquiry into the cause of the explosion was ordered by Lieut.-Col. Clarence E. Parker of Tyler.

At daylight there began the saddest phase of any disaster. Their last hope gone, mothers and fathers who throughout the night had hovered at the edge of the ruins, turned away in despair.

All day long they plodded through streets of the raw little oil towns, turning back the blankets from bruised young faces and afraid of what they would find. Some parents had as many as five children among the missing.

Undertakers faced a shortage of coffins. Student embalmers were rushed from Dallas and Forth Worth, found more work than the doctors and nurses.

Grim Order

The State Department of Safety sent two fingerprint experts to the scene in the hope that a comparison of fingerprints made on school children at the Dallas Centennial might aid in identification.

The confusion that existed on the campus of the school after the explosion occurred 15 minutes before dismissal time yesterday was replaced by a grim orderliness.

A heavy rain soaked the ruins during the night. Rescuers worked in deep red clay mud, methodically sorting out the tangle of brick and tile and steel, twisted framework of school desks and sodden text books and gay-colored drawing supplies.

Fragments of the costumes worn by a group of children who had been entertaining a Parent-Teachers Association yesterday stuck up out of the pile.

All night long the radio drowned out the roll call of the missing in an effort to speed the parents' search. At the same time, the Governor broadcast an appeal to the curious to stay away and leave the roads clear for the ambulances that ringed the campus ready to rush to hospital or morgue.

Derricks Rear Up

Col. Parker said the wreckage should be cleared away by night. It is being hauled off in an assortment of trucks supplied by the state highway commission, the National parks service and various oil companies.

National guardsmen kept the situation under complete control. There has been no disorder, following the first frantic confusion.

A field kitchen has been set up on the campus next to a first aid station. The Salvation Army is serving sandwiches.

Many students who were blown through windows were fortunate enough to escape with their lives, although many of them were badly injured.

Only the oil derricks on the campus, symbol of the new wealth that built the $1,000,000 consolidated school, remained upright and unshaken.

Automobiles parked as far as 500 feet away from the wrecked building were battered like tin cans. Windows were missing from buildings for blocks round. Trees were uprooted.

Quirk of Fate

Fate treated A. W. Walfrop, physical education instructor, in an ironic manner. He left a class on the campus outside the building and went inside just before the blast. He was listed among the dead, his pupils among the survivors.

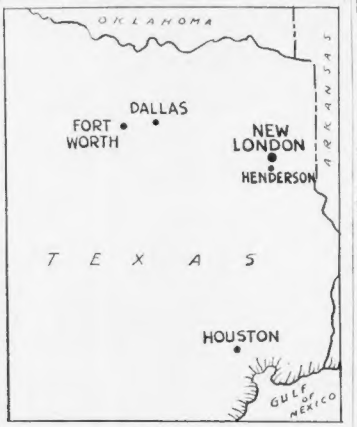
Some of the older high school boys who escaped injury re-entered the shattered ruins and aided in rescue work. One boy told of being pinned between an uprooted radiator and the wall. Regaining consciousness, he found the body of a girl in his arms. He was unhurt.

George Harry was an overjoyed at finding his two small grandsons unharmed that he succumbed to a heart attack on the school grounds.

Total enrollment was more than 1000. The faculty was made up of 34 members. Their salaries aggregating $72,000.

The blasted building housed grades ranging from 3 to 11, had 20 classrooms, as well as laboratories, study rooms, libraries, an auditorium and offices.

Scene of School Disaster



Situated nine miles northwest of Henderson, Texas, the New London school is probably the wealthiest public school in the world. At least seven producing oil wells are on the campus itself. The school serves villages in an area of 30 square miles.

Pathos in Scenes at Tragedy

By the Associated Press

Dallas—Coffin makers were swamped with orders for medium-sized caskets in which to bury victims of the London Consolidated School tragedy.

New London—The name of Alvin Gerdes, no stranger to print, appeared again today but it drew no cheers—only bowed heads. Hero of the district champion London football team and considered a brilliant college prospect, he was one of the blast victims.

Dallas—Hundreds of dosages of anti-tetanus serum were sped to the blast scene. Physicians said it was needed badly because of the danger of lockjaw developing from wounds of the injured.

Durant, Okla.—"It's terrible," said Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, and an expression of dismay spread over her face when news of the tragedy reached her.

Wills Point, Tex.—Jesse Couch, 50, was one of the thousands who hurried to the blast scene by motor car. He was killed in a collision near Tyler.

New London—Scores of parents were attending a Parent-Teacher Association meeting 200 yards from the high school building when they heard the roar. They rushed screaming into a blinding dust fog toward the debris. Their children were under the felled brick and steel.

New London—Ten seconds more and I would have been in a part of the building where everyone was killed," said F. F. Waggoner, principal of the nearby elementary school. "I never want to enter another school building."

New London—"What will we do now?" asked C. R. Sory, the school band director. "Everything we've worked for is gone. Just about every family in the community has more grief than anyone should have to bear."

Henderson, Texas—A mother and father sat silently at the blast scene until the early hours of dawn—beside the body of their son. Another mother, after a fruitless vigil, was led away by oil workers despite her sobs: "I can't go away. My baby may be alive in there and calling me."

But there virtually was no hope that anyone caught in the building survived.

Overton, Tex.—Bodies were placed on cots here in a building formerly used as a skating rink. While frantic parents moved from cot to cot a sign overhead read: "Gentlemen will please remove hats while skating."

New London, Tex.—Only a few hours after the explosion came this cable:

"Our sincere sympathy (signed) Kanto Commercial School, Tokio, Japan."

Another from Maracaibo, Venezuela, inquired for the safety of two grandchildren enrolled in the school.

Many Mothers Storm Morgues for Children

Overton, Tex., March 19 (AP)—A shriek, half of anguish, half terror, echoed in the American Legion auditorium. Another mother had identified her child among those who died in the New London school explosion.

The improvised morgue scene was described today by a visitor, Mrs. James F. Laughead:

"Mattresses spread row on row bore the mangled, smashed and torn bodies of 116 victims—children and adults.

"Through the big hall shuffled a crowd of men, women and children hoping against hope they would not find a loved one among the corpses stretched on the mattresses.

"Now and then a woman screamed and listeners knew she had come upon her child among the dead.

"In an undertaking place sheets covered 35 or 40 bodies. Along with frantic parents and relatives who sought their kin were curious onlookers. Some lifted the sheet-shrouds.

"In the great crowds that gathered wherever bodies had been taken screams and wailings were heard. Two women, one of them the mother of two youngsters who had been in the school, searched through the Legion hall's dead.

"The children were not to be found there. Half an hour later, in an undertaking establishment the mother's search ended — there among the dead were her small, overalled sons."

Dynamite in School Not in Blast

Overton, Texas, March 19 (AP)—American Legion officials said last night several sticks of dynamite had been found in the wreckage of the London Consolidated School but had no connection with the terrific explosion there.

Legion officials said dynamite had been placed in a closet two weeks ago after part of the explosive had been used for blasting a football field.

They explained that the dynamite was found in a part of the school which was not badly damaged.

U. S. Death Toll In Past Disasters

By the Associated Press

The magnitude of the calamity at New London, Tex., is brought into relief by comparison with other disasters in the history of the United States.

Available records indicate that not more than a dozen times since the founding of the nation have more than 400 persons, children and adults, lost their lives in a single accident, storm or other disaster.

By contrast, 602 died in the famous Iroquois Theater fire in Chicago in 1903; about 500 in San Francisco's earthquake and fire in 1906, and 1021 in the burning of the steamer General Slocum in New York's East River in 1904.

Major disasters involving only children in this country have been few. The worst was the Collinswood school fire, in Cleveland, March 4, 1908, when 172 pupils and two teachers lost their lives because the doors opened the wrong way.

A child stumbled and fell, his schoolmates fell upon him, and the doors against which scores of children beat with futile, terrified fists sealed their doom.

A decade ago occurred another children's tragedy. On May 18, 1927, 40 died when an explosion, attributed to a bomber, wrecked part of the Bath, Mich., consolidated school building.

Seventy-two children died in a Christmas party false fire panic at Calumet, Mich., December 24, 1913, and 77 in a Cleveland, S. C., school fire May 17, 1923.

An abridged, representative list of major catastrophes in American history, with the first figure showing the dead, follows:

1459—Explosion of Mississipi river steamer Sultana, 1865.
1226—Explosion of munitions ship, Halifax, N. S., 1917.
1180—Florida hurricane, 1928.
820—Midwest tornadic storms, 1925.
812—Overturning of steamer Eastland, Chicago river, 1915.
400—Breaking of St. Francis dam, Southern California, 1928.
360—Monongah, W. Va., mine disaster, 1907.
318—Ohio penitentiary fire, Columbus, 1930.
268—Burning of Conway Theater, Brooklyn, N. Y., 1876.
250—Chicago great fire, 1871.
215—Destruction by fire of piers and vessels, Hoboken, N. J., 1900.
179—Boyertown, Pa., opera house fire, 1903.
124—Cleveland clinic fire, 1929.
134—S.S. Morro Castle, off New Jersey coast, 1934.
88—Factory fire, Lawrence, Mass., 1863.
47—Fort Point street car tragedy, Boston, 1916.
44—Pickwick Club collapse, Boston, 1925.
27—Hotel Acadia fire, Boston, 1913.
21—Commercial street molasses tank collapse, Boston, 1916.
In Peabody 21 parochial school children were killed when St. John's school burned and collapsed on October 28, 1915.

Man Drops Dead As He Sees Bodies

New London, Tex., March 19 (AP)—George Hardy, 63, fell dead late last night as he watched workers carry mangled bodies from the school building ruins.

FATHER OF TWO VICTIMS TELLS OF HORROR

By E. D. POWELL
New London School Explosion Eye-Witness.

Overton, Tex., March 19 (INS)—I was an eye-witness to the explosion that wrecked the New London high school and killed two of my children.

Thank God, my other two children, also in the school, were spared. I went over the top in France, but I saw nothing that could compare with the horrible scene at the school following the blast.

I was in the garden of my home a quarter-mile from the schoolhouse.

Suddenly the ground shook. I glanced up in time to see a great cloud of smoke circle skyward in the direction of the school. My immediate thought was that a tank battery used for the storage of oil in our big oil field here had exploded.

I had not thought that it might be the school. Being an oil man I rushed toward the scene of the blast.

SCENE OF HORROR

As I drew near I suddenly realized that it was not a tank explosion. Rushing upon the school grounds I found a few earlier arrivals beginning to drag out the dead and injured. I started helping but keeping an eye out for my four children.

After helping bring bodies from the building for a while I sought my own children.

I located one, Edna, 12. I was unable to continue to assist others. A little longer search and I found Eloise, 14. My heart was gone. They were our babies. It was an hour afterwards that we finally located our other two children. They had been spared.

I can't tell all that I saw when I reached the school. I know that I stepped over and walked among more than one hundred dead bodies laying in the school yard in the search for my children.

Everybody was walking over the bodies frantically, trying to locate their loved ones. Many bodies were horribly mangled, some beyond identification.

The clothes had been torn from many of the bodies by the blast. I saw bodies with no heads, and others with legs and arms missing.

Boy, Girl Dug Alive Out of Ruins

New London, Texas—March 19 (AP)—Clasped in each others arms, a boy and girl were found alive in the ruins of the blast-shattered $1,000,000 London Consolidated school eight hours after an explosion killed hundreds of children.

A crude arch of falling debris sheltered the two.

Hysterical and sobbing, they were carried through the throngs hastily and their names were not disclosed. They were of junior high school age.

SCHOOLS HERE SAFE FROM BLASTS

Declaring that no ordinary boiler explosion could cause such havoc as occurred in New London, Texas, yesterday, when more than 450 school children lost their lives in a school explosion, authorities here today asserted that Boston and Massachusetts schools are perfectly safe.

Pointing out the danger of oil wells, oil fields and gas-feeding and carrying lines near school buildings as is the condition in Texas, local authorities said that the greatest problem in this state in making thorough check-ups of all boilers is the Massachusetts schools at regular intervals.

A regular staff of boiler inspectors is employed by the state to inspect the boilers in state and school buildings regularly. These men work under the direction of George C. Parsons, chief boiler inspector, in conjunction with an expert staff employed by insurance companies, and are continually on inspection tours to the various state and school buildings.

GREATEST SCHOOL DISASTER OF AGE SHOCKS WORLD

Eye-Witness Story

Rope Holds Back Weeping Parents

(When an explosion wrecked the New London school Charles Saulsberry, sports editor of the Oklahoma City Times, was covering spring training of the Oklahoma city baseball team at nearby Jacksonville, Tex. In the following eye-witness account, Saulsberry tells of what he saw when he reached New London two hours after the fatal blast.)

By CHARLES SAULSBERRY
Written for the Associated Press

New London, Tex., March 19 (AP)—I saw this little Texas oil town struggle Thursday night to recover from one of the most crushing death blows the southwest ever has known.

Just across the streets and I write this is the explosion wrecked school building where hundreds of school children and teachers were blasted to death.

Now, only a few hours after the blast, at least a thousand resolute workers labor under spotlights to wrest the broken bodies from a mass of twisted steel and bricks.

Distraught parents strain at a rope which rings the disaster scene. Their faces streamed with tears, their hearts smothered with despair, they wait to learn the fate of their children—but with little hope.

Incredible Story

There were no shouts, no screams. Just an ear-rending roar and the whole center of the L-shaped structure seemed to lift from its foundations and fall back to bury the occupants under a mountain of brick and tile.

I raced here in my automobile with O. J. Kahn, Oklahoman-Times staff photographer, from Jacksonville, Texas, about 25 miles away. We were there covering the spring training camp of the Oklahoma City Indians baseball team.

With us rushed a long line of motor cars, heading for the scene, spurred by the incredible story which spread through the countryside.

We reached this little oil town about 5 p. m., two hours after the blast. Already the town was in confusion. It's only what we call "wide place in the road," hardly to be called a town.

Bricks and tile spread from the wrecked building in all directions. Ambulances raced to the front of the building, pick up their burden of little bodies, and speed away.

Probe Ruins

Hushed and white-faced, they press against the giant rope stretched around the school. The spotlights, mounted on trucks, send their searching white fingers over the ruined structure, flash on the oil wells which surround the schoolyard.

Doctors about tense orders. Men dig with their bare hands into the pile of bricks and steel. Frantically laboring to reach the crushed bodies. Stretcher bearers hurry in and out. Word as they clear the trail of death.

Already three grim-faced reporters left the 200 block here, being dragged from the assembly. Rumors race in hushed whispers through the crowd. Some say 500 must have been killed. Others say 200. But there is no doubt death and its job thoroughly, brutally.

A few victims escaped with injuries, but from the mass of wreckage the real story of horror unfolds. It is one of sudden death striking in mid-afternoon of a warm, sunny day.

Most of the victims were trapped in a long two-story middle section of the building. In one of the two wings a Parent-Teacher meeting were in progress when the blast struck. Most of them escaped.

Here and there an eye witness tells how at the moment a rumble which heralded the blast. The roof lifted, they say, as if propelled by some giant hand.

Then down it fell in a rain of horror to crush its victims in debris. The workers rushed from adjoining wells, exactly the first survivors as they rushed bleeding from the buildings last damaged, and hurried them to nearby homes.

Seek Children

Soon the full weight of the tragedy fell on the peaceful little town and hundreds hurried to the scene.

Quick to respond, neighboring towns of Kilgore, Longview and Henderson rushed ambulances and soon the rescue was in full orderly stride and as it continues here.

One gray-haired woman tells me she had two children in the school. She has waited hours in the hope they would be found alive. But as the hours pass she is becoming resigned to the terrible truth.

Now she is going to Tyler, a neighboring town to join the hundreds of other parents swarming through hospital wards in search of loved ones.

BLAST RECALLS OHIO TRAGEDY OF 174 DEAD

Cleveland, March 19 (AP)—A memorial garden stands today at the north end of the Memorial School tract in Cleveland's East Side—in memory of 174 persons who lost their lives in the Collinwood School fire of March 4, 1908.

Until the New London explosion yesterday the old brick and frame building had been the scene of the worst modern times disaster involving mainly children.

The Collinwood School disaster resulted in regulations in almost every state that exit doors open outward. The deaths of 172 children and two teachers also hastened the push for state inspection of school buildings, called the Lakeview School and housing Collinwood public school classes from the first to the eighth grades, was razed by flames which razed between walls and floor. Multiple investigations of the cause was overheated steam pipe.

Less than an hour after classes opened promptly 20 minutes ago, the fire alarm rang. The children, thinking it was a fire drill, walked out of the rooms in orderly fashion.

Then smoke and tongues of flame burst out of the walls. One class, running toward the front exit, jammed against the inward-opening door and the children died there.

Others turned and ran in terror toward the rear. A child stumbled on the stair. His schoolmates fell on top of him and soon they were piled nearly six bodies deep there.

Tragedy in Richest U.S. School Area Laid to Gas

New London, Tex., March 19 (AP)—Residents of the London school district have prided themselves on the fact they live in the most thickly populated and wealthiest rural school area in the nation. Situation created by the forest of oil derricks covering their hills and valleys.

But another product of this rich oil field, natural gas, brought stunning tragedy, in the opinion of W. C. Ehaw, school superintendent. Shaw, recovering from injuries to head and arms, said he believed an accumulation of gas in the walls and beneath the building caused the explosion at the school.

The tiny town of New London was born of feverish oil activity in 1930-31.

Leasing drew hundreds to the area. Most inhabitants were in a camp established by the Humble Company for its employes. Because it was a short distance from a hamlet called London, now termed "Old London," the citizens decided to call it New London.

It is not incorporated. The town of approximately 2000 inhabitants is located 24 miles west of Tyler and about 60 miles from the Louisiana border. The school had an unusually large enrollment. Buses went out into the countryside daily to bring in rural students.

RED CROSS SET TO RUSH AID

Washington, March 19 (AP)—The Red Cross said today it was ready to send a large number of trained disaster workers to New London, Tex., if the situation resulting from the school explosions there warranted.

Albert Evans, a disaster director who has been engaged in flood relief work at Little Rock, Ark., went to New London last night. His report will be the basis of the organization's action, officials here said.

Because of flood relief activities in lower Mississippi river states, there is an abundance of trained Red Cross personnel within a few hours journey of New London.

SEEK TO AVERT OTHER BLASTS

Washington, March 19 (INS)—The Bureau of Mines today launched a sweeping inquiry into the New London, Texas, school explosion, and will determine first whether underground gas conducted carelessly beneath the school house.

Dr. John H. Finch, director of the bureau, told International News Service he "couldn't tell" from accounts whether the terrific blast that made a huge crater in the rocket of the school, might be followed by more such explosions in the oilfield districts.

"I can't tell that yet," he said. "The causes are, of course, obscure."

Dr. Finch called a meeting of officials of his bureau, and summoned all of its safety division heads.

Battle Leak in Dam

Hero's Three Tots Perish In Blast

New London, Texas, March 19—Three of Joe Davidson's four children lost their lives in the London Consolidated school blast. "This is the worst I have ever known," said the 54-year-old World War aviator and holder of the Croix De Guerre.

Planes twice were shot down under him during the war.

MILL DISASTER RECALLED IN LAWRENCE

Lawrence, March 19 (AP)—Seventy-seven years ago one of the country's major disasters occurred here when the Pemberton Mill collapsed killing 88 persons and injuring 275.

Records showed, as accounts of the school disaster flowed to this city, that 670 men, women and children were employed in the nineteen when, without warning, the structure trembled, fell and fell on January 10, 1860. One of the astonishing features of the collapse was that 207 escaped uninjured although the building tumbled about them. Of 275 injured, 116 were seriously hurt and the remainder were only slightly injured.

Thirteen bodies were so badly mutilated they were unidentified as were buried in a group lot in Lawrence cemetery.

The building was only seven years old when it fell. It had been built in 1903 and had been used continuously with the exception of 3 years 1857-58.

Disaster in Texas Recalls Famous Tragedies Here

The school disaster in New London, Texas, today recalled several disasters in New England, four of which are still fresh in the minds of the public.

The Hotel Aradia tragedy in December, 1913, took a toll of 27 lives with 18 others injured.

The Fore River channel tragedy in which 47 persons were drowned when a trolley car ran through an open draw in November, 1916.

The Commercial street collapse of a molasses tank in January, 1916, took a toll of 21 lives with more than fifty persons injured.

Most recent of the local disasters was the Pickwick Club collapse while hundreds of persons were celebrating Fourth of July at the club in 1925. Forty-four were killed.

Blizzard Buries Utah and Idaho

Salt Lake City, March 19 (AP)—Visions of spring finery for Easter—eight days away—were buried today beneath a blizzard that blanketed part of Idaho and Utah with snow and blocked highways.

Johnson Pupil Places

North Andover, March 19—Thomas McKiernan, Johnson High student, took second place in the Essex County Oratorical Contest conducted last evening in Peabody under the auspices of the American Legion.

GIRL WATCHES AS FRIENDS ARE KILLED

Martha Harris, 18-year-old student in the London school, was a short distance away from the structure when it burst asunder with a terrific roar and killed hundreds of children. She describes the scene.

By MARTHA HARRIS
Written for the Associated Press

Overton, Tex., March 19 (AP)—I was in the Home Economy Building about 60 yards from the school when I heard a terrible roar. The earth shook and brick and glass came showering down.

I looked out a window and saw my friends dying like flies. Kids were blown out through the top into the room. Some of them hung up there and others fell off to the ground. I saw girls in my class jumping out windows like they were deserting a burning ship.

My brother Milton Harris, 16 years old, jumped and didn't get a scratch; just a little bruise on his knee when he hit the ground. My friend, Geraldine Ruffin, jumped out too and was not hurt.

My brother said the place just blew up all of a sudden and scared them awfully. It took his breath away and all he knew was he had to jump somewhere, anywhere.

I saw a girl fall out of the top down through a big window which opened to the outside. The glass cut her leg off just like a knife would.

The bodies of the kids were stacked up just like you would stack of cakes after the explosion.

I'll never forget how I saw my playmates bodies torn, some of them were blown to bits and never will be found, I know. It was horrible.

Mysterious Six; That's Half Dozen

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Who are the mysterious six? Where do they hail from? ...

Somewhere that number of our Supreme Court judges are waiting the word. What can they do? Can a mystery still turned out to be a fireside chat?

Does the mystery six mean that genuises can be bought for jobs? Justice Hits her big fiddle and steals a gander at her constituents to see if she is getting on, even or more.

Who are the phantom sextet? Line 'Em up, boys, and we will send you an autographed paper napkin from the last victory (Rep) dinner.

Banner Suffolk Season Predicted | Adams Paints Golden Future

By BILL CUNNINGHAM

Charles Adams, president of Suffolk Downs, was in a mood to predict when, late this week, he was host at a luncheon at the Massachusetts Racing Commission. Mr. Adams has just returned from Miami, Florida, where he attended the annual meeting of the National Association of Racing Commissioners.

Suffolk Downs, from the very start, has been in favor of the sound policy that was put into effect by the Massachusetts Racing Commission. The fact that every winner and any other horse so ended by the stewards or by representatives of the commission are examined gives no ground for any other criticism.

The horses and the Winterfests and the Whirlaways are not asked to the same records that are set up by the horses owned by some ordinary owner.

LARGE DEMAND FOR STALLS

"I'm almost sure there has been a large demand for stalls. Here's proof that some horses to each class. He will accept a limited number of $1500 horses, below that class and above the $2500 class, and he says there is a shortage of horses in both of these classifications.

"I wonder how many of the better stables will ship for the Narragansett meeting which opens on May 1 and then remain in New England until Saturday. The way the weeks seem to run this year, a matter between Suffolk Downs and Narragansett Park will be decided before long.

"I find general business conditions are better everywhere. People have more money, more time for amusement and are more optimistic for the future. These conditions will help racing and I believe Suffolk Downs will benefit.

"We have made several improvements at Suffolk this summer and expect to have a successful season. We do not plan to make Suffolk Downs as big as Hialeah Park in Miami or Hialeah Park at Long Island, but we hope to make it a first class track in every respect. We have no desire to 'steal' a Fair Boston date, although I think Suffolk Downs could operate successfully as any race track in the country.

McKAIN Gets Chance ON HILL

By BILL GRIMES

Sarasota, Fla., March 19 During the second game of the Red Sox varsity-jayvees series today, Archie "Hap" McKain, the husky southpaw acquired from Minneapolis, will be given an opportunity to show his wares

FRED HOEY Writes:

Hello everybody. This is Fred Hoey speaking.

Like many young athletes whose sudden ascendancy to dizzy heights draws barbs and brickbats from the cynical, Joe DiMaggio, of the Yankees, idol of millions of baseball fans, is now paying the penalty for his greatness. Managers, and even a few writers, profess to have found some vulnerable spots in the young Italian's baseball armor.

FRED HOEY

DiMaggio's most outspoken critic is Rogers Hornsby, St. Louis Browns' manager, who never considers it a successful day unless he has popped off at some player or some club. Our colleague, Austen Lake, columnized this notorious skeptic in beautiful fashion on these sport pages the other evening.

Ever since DiMaggio was first publicized as the generation's greatest outfield find, Hornsby not only refused to hop on the band wagon, but has shouted considerable about Joe's shortcomings as a ball player

Cunningham Plan To Rest on Coast

It begins to look as though base running would be a prominent factor in the National League this season. Frankie Frisch of the Cards and Charlie Dressen of the Cincinnati Reds are convinced this is the only way they can balance the lack of long hitters in their clubs. Both the Cards and Red camps are bustling with young, eager athletes and veterans who show a new-born enthusiasm.

Base sliding gets plenty of attention. "Hit the dirt, hit it!" is the constant cry, as the boys strive to return to good old-fashioned ideas of baseball and the running club. Let's hope Frisch and Dressen don't change their minds. Let's also hope we get more scientific baseball and less power-house stuff.

Hill had fewer white troops in the field and only 1,241 cases of primary malaria were reported through the entire campaign. We used as a preventive a dose of 10 grains of quinine daily for each soldier. It was hard to get them to take it at first but we put the stuff in doses in one pill and sugar coated the pill.

The soldiers took their medicine with their wine and when they saw how beneficial it was they complained if for any reason it was omitted.

I think the lessons we learned in the campaign will be of great benefit not only to colonial wars but in the peaceful settlement of financial questions.

What the Debts Would Do, If Paid

REPRESENTATIVE HAROLD KNUTSON of Minnesota puts the facts about the unpaid W[illegible] debts in a nutshell.

He has told his colleagues in Congress that if the entire war debt were paid to America by Europe it would

1937 Spring Fashion Trends Are Sure to Make Pretty Girls of All Their Wearers

Heroines of Past Make Way for Newer Modes

By ANNICE BRINK

EVERYONE'S GONE INTO a frightful dither over making pretty girls of us this spring. Not in the old school of frills and furbelows and sweet coyness, but in an entirely new way. At the rate smart girls are snatching spring fashions, it's easy to see they love it!

What the Girls On Front Cover Are Wearing

FOUR SOCIETY GIRLS, pictured on the front cover of this section, model four of the season's biggest suit hits. And not one is like another in type or in coloring! Each was awarded the black and silver tag of Fashion Congress recognition. From left to right, here's who wears them and where

Dark Tones In Patent Footwear

ESTABLISHED in Fashion circles last year, the colored shoe puts a smart foot forward for spring 1937.

But it is a changed shoe—no more, blatant colors. The new darker shoe colors are beautifully styled to blend or contrast with the rich colors of this season's costume.

Smart women have discovered that one or two colored accessories give decided chic to the ensemble. Last year's mode for many colored accessories is passe. This no doubt explains the popularity of the colored fabric or leather shoes of this season. They are matched with handbags or gloves, to give just the right color accent to the smart ensemble.

Dress Woolens Are Lightweight

LIGHTWEIGHT soft woole in pastel shades are favored for dresses this season. A lacy weave with a raised, self-color stripe is shown in monotone jersey.

Pageantry Colors in Hosiery

RADIANT "SUN" hues give new glamour to spring hosiery, are effective in semi-sheer as well as the colorful sheer styles. Blending overtones give a flattering changeable effect slenderizing to the legs and make the problem of blending hosiery and shoes or costume colors an easy one.

Such romantic and suggestive names as golden beige, bright blonde, copper-beige, mauve-beige describe the gamut of new hosiery tones.

All based on the fashionable beige family, they range from soft grayed hues for gray or navy costumes, to the vivid coppery tones that blend with the leather tans and are smartly striking with black.

Variety in the Suit Costume

CHANGING TOPCOATS gives variety to the suit costume, and loose swagger coats may be worn with casually styled suits, or the fitted reefer coat will dress up many a plain tailored suit.

CHESTERFIELD SUIT

MISS DORIS POLAND in svelte herringbone stripe men's wear fabric of banker's grey . . . with a boa of silver fox scarves . . . the perfect sophisticated about-town costume.

Scott Studios, Inc.

Swaggers Are Smart for Wee Misses

FOR THE GIRL who is just budding out, nothing is smarter than the short swagger or "box" coat, with its straight or flaring lines that swing out from her figure. Girls of this age like the softly designed dresses, too, with little belts or sashes, because they give better figure lines than the more sophisticated types.

Sweaters and skirts are ideal for a change, with this swagger coat. And the revived "jumper" frock with peasant blouse or feminine yoke.

Daisies Bloom In Fashion's Sun

IT HAS ALWAYS been said, by French designers who know, that daisies always sell! And Ciat may be why the story in floral prints comes to us first in the beautiful daisy prints from France, quickly modified and adapted to American taste, by our own manufacturers. Stemmed daisies on bright color grounds will be worn for daytime, and huge modernistic daisies are scattered over evening frocks.

Accessories Make Ensembles Varied

MORE THAN ONE set of accessories with the three-piece ensemble will develop the spring wardrobe in the tailored or feminine styles, both equally smart this year. Gay peasant scarfs, frilly neckwear, tailored shirts or blouses, plaid Ascots—and either feminine or tailored handbags, hats and gloves will do wonders to change the aspect of the ensemble costume.

Gloves Have Color Variety

SOFT SUEDES or washable doeskins, smart fitting kid gloves and many varieties of fabric gloves are all noted in color and will be equally popular in the various beige tones this year. Black, navy or brown are used as staple colors in the wardrobe. White will be worn more as warmer weather brings white accents into prominence.

Non-Crushing Fabrics Practical

CREPES, BOUCLES and sponges that do not crush are smart and practical. They are shown in a range of colors that highlights the dustier pastels, the stronger colors of the Coronation and the vivid colors of South American inspiration that will grow in favor after Easter.

Short Jacket Of Fur A Vogue

THE STYLE STAGE seems to be set for the short fur jacket because so many women have woolen dresses they will want to wear this spring and the abbreviated fur garment is the logical in-between wrap for cool days which make protection necessary.

For country wear three types are recommended, the sleeveless jerkin of beige galyak, the cardigan in natural mole and the chubby reefer of seal. More dressy are the bulky Elsie of silver fox, the sleeveless bolero of navy lamb and the flare cutaway of caracul.

Jeweled Belts For Day or Night

BELTS ARE tremendously important in the spring costume picture, say French designers. And they sprinkle them with jewels in all bright colors, to give them a costume jewelry look.

They are striking on plain frocks, and may match jewel-studded handbags, or harmonize with other costume jewelry. With coronation influences so strong, much is expected of belts and bracelets, clips and other jeweled accessories to carry out the luxury mode this year.

Bigger Drumsticks

EVEN the chickens have to go on a diet now. A special diet has been evolved to grow bigger and better drumsticks and more white meat on roasting chickens. The chickens are allowed to roam on the range for 20 to 25 weeks before going on the fattening diet.

You'll Find Spring's Hats Are Fun This Year

HATS ARE FUN this spring. So much fun that it wouldn't surprise me to find many girls developing a strained expression as they seek and seek, trying to find a hat they can wear.

Here's the secret. You can wear any giddy bonnet the season offers, because they're at the prettiest in years, but you can't put one over a winter-weary coiffure or a January makeup and expect it to look like anything.

Those two things rapidly banished, away with you! No matter how the flowers, the birds, bees, veils and "Follow me Lads" ribbons are piled on, you can take 'em!

* * *

ROSES ARE RED on many a bonnet . . . from the mushroom shape with one rose realistically growing out of the buttand, to a coquettish little profile plaque with three roses piled on top.

A bonnet of stitched tulle piped two rows of snowdrops and violets over the forehead, and there is a choker of snowdrops and violets to be worn when the costume is a severely simple monotone.

All-flower hats are around, to be worn at important luncheons, for cocktail or dinner time. You won't go wrong when you weather your head in flowers if the rest of the costume is toned down to widow's weeds severity. It's the only way to do the thing effectively.

* * *

NO CROWN IS high, for sports, tailored or afternoon wear. Even the natty little jockeys and homburgs which go with man-tailored suits are crushed down.

The biggest suit hat of all—in number, though it's smallest in size—is the flat, shallow sailor.

Swing Slips New Note in Lingerie

WITH THE RHYTHM and movement of dress design this year, it was inevitable that this swish and "swing" should be adapted to lingerie. And with the modes of 1911 competing with those of 1850 in present fashions, no one is surprised to hear the rustle of taffeta petticoats again.

Ruffles and lace give the new feminine touch to lingerie of gleaming satin or smooth crepe. Bias cuts and special gorings help mould the figure in the desired long diaphragm, high bust lines. And to give the right "swing," these slip skirts are cut wide and flaring.

Prevent Curdling

Boiled custard curdles because the egg is heated too quickly in the hot milk. Mix well together the eggs and sugar and pour the hot milk over the egg mixture. Return to double boiler and there will be no separating of the eggs and milk.

Salad Suggestion

Stuffed prunes add a decorative touch to any salad. Walnut halves, shredded coconut, or carrots, cottage cheese, cream cheese, or American cheese of either the mild or nipper variety are popular fillings.

Gay Colors in Fashion

Watch pleats—from the kilty skirts of play suits to dinner dresses all bewildered from neck to hem.

Watch separate furs—the tail girls will sing silver foxes, the small girls will wear cute furred, chubby reefers, or baby jackets of flat furs.

Watch hats most of all. You'll see birds, bees and butterflies as well as veils and never ribbons. Most of them will be worn for the wide-eyed look far back on the head, even though they're not strictly called off-the-face hats. Others will tip sharply over the right eye, particularly if they're no decoration a mirror.

They'll all be absurd, distracting and quite comic pretty.

And so will you.

Pleats Gain In Importance

PLEATS ARE one of the most significant trends of the season. They make the accented short skirt look new and very youthful. All pleated skirts are usually of the inch-wide wide pleated type, cut on the straight, and stitched down from waistline to hips.

More pleats than before appear on the newest outside streets. These are especially flattering for women of mature figure.

Multicolor New Note in Sheers

MULTICOLORED stripes in sheers are new, not only for evening wear, but for afternoon dresses developed in the pleats. Two-color combinations, such as royal blue with pale beige, aqua or topaz with deep wine, red are color suggestions.

Will Your Dance Frock Be Shorter?

SCHIAPARELLI'S shorter length dance frock, introduced at his Paris opening, is gradually finding favor here and is expected to become more popular as the season advances, chiefly because it has a youthful air and offers more comfort in dancing.

This Phelps Corset Will Do What No Other Corset Can Do!

It is different in every way from other corsets! Just imagine—it supports the heaviest abdomen without the slightest bulge at the waist line. AND—it actually REDUCES! Do your hips refuse to be reduced? Does your diaphragm "bulge" in spite of tight lacings and restraining brassieres? Are surplus pounds your problem? Don't despair because ordinary foundation garments you have worn have failed to control these figure defects! The Phelps reducing corset is the solution. A "try on" will convince you! You are INCHES slimmer the moment you put it on. It is made of a specially loomed fabric (not rubber)—so durable that it may be worn, and worn —and then repaired (without charge) to extend its service period. It is designed for YOUR figure—moulding, holding and supporting it and reducing unwanted flesh around your hips and diaphragm. Every model differs according to the individual need. And—because a Corset can be judged only the way it controls and supports—the Phelps Co. will not show it to you unless you are willing to try it on. Of course there's no obligation to buy. But—when you see what it does to your figure you'll want it, I know! The W. H. Phelps Co. is at 28 Tremont Street. LAFayette 2490. Established since 1832.

Glove Styles Are More Diversified

GLOVES ARE more diversified than ever before, say Paris designers. And gloves assume new importance in carrying out the style of the costume, whether it be mannishly tailored or regal or feminine.

Accents of color, in gloves and handbag, gloves and scarf, or gloves and one other accessory of the costume, give relief and decided air of chic to an otherwise uninteresting ensemble. Combination, blue or red, rich tones of yellow, many leather tans, and rust hues, give opportunity to use the gloves for color accent to the costume.

MISS POLLY COTTER in a three-piece suit of the loveliest color of the season, thistle, done in superlatively soft imported shetland . . . all the perfection of classic Creed tailoring . . . the ever-useful topcoat . . . and the sudden zestful touch of navy and white polka dot ascot. Modified Tyrolean felt in navy. Deane

TWO-TIMER ENSEMBLE

MISS MARION LAWRENCE models a two-time ensemble in thick, rough-textured silk (much like wool) that may be the basis for the story of the Palm Beach visitor who titivated the fashionables with an all-beige wardrobe. It's honey-beige with matching fox . . . with it is another piece, not shown . . . it is a beautifully simple afternoon frock to be worn with the same cape that tops this dramatic evening gown! Filene's, Inc.—Wellesley.

Paris Points on Suit Chic

LANVIN features box-shaped jackets, very full and usually three-quarters length. Large patch pockets and leather encrustations. Leather is an important decorative medium, as well as stitching.

There are quite a few bolero suits. Sleeves are still wide and box-shaped.

Outstanding models include a green antelope jacket worn over a green wool skirt. A white gros-grain suit with big, square pockets and a fringe of colored tassels at the shoulders. Another beige kasha suit had pockets extending from seam to front, and a grege wool suit showed a fitted jacket with a big, black leather pocket at one side (left) of the jacket.

* * *

ALIX sponsors an extremely form-fitted line for day, with high necks and flat, often short sleeves. Classical tailored suits with hip-length, fitted jackets. A few jackets with yokes.

She uses black stitching on light brown and military-looking epaulettes rolled like a cigarette at the top of the sleeve.

* * *

PAQUIN favors square shoulders and wide sleeves with the fulness concentrated at the top. Jackets are form-fitted. Skirts are plain with fulness concentrated in front, while some have a floating panel in front. Others, on the other hand, fasten at the back, either in envelope fashion or buttoned.

Short basques and numerous pockets are featured, as well as white embroidery and braiding on dark suits.

Neckwear Colors Blend With Suit

WHILE WHITE or dark neckwear is the rule for Spring, another method of achieving smartness is by blending the color of neckwear and suit. Thus beige suits with a flock of brown in the tweed, are often worn with brown neckwear combining these two colors. The monotone ensemble, which promises to become smarter this year, gives many interesting chances for color blending.

Veils Flutter and Flatter

WHETHER THE HAT is small or brimmed, high or low-crowned, matters not, for it will be veiled anyhow. Femininity it is its height, and nothing is more flattering to the average woman than a glamorous little veil fluffing about her hair and eyes.

Loosely draped veils are worn about the brims of breton sailors with an entirely new 1937 look to them. Another trick of Fashion is to throw a large circular veil entirely over the hat, letting it fall in graceful ripples front and back.

Border Prints Are Important

FLOWER or coptic borders and many modernistic effects are used to trim the print frock in its own design. It has been many seasons since borders have been so important, but with swag skirts and soft draped bodices and sleeves, the border treatment runs its set long and becomes a beautiful part of the dress design itself. These borders are especially effective around hems and sashes.

Grandma's Sacque a Handbag Vogue

BORROWING from the Mid-Victorian era, from which fashion derives much inspiration this year, handbag manufacturers have given us the "sacque" and it even has the cord of drawstring at the top. When Queen Victoria carried it, it was made of rich brocade or velvet. But now it returns in softest and finest leathers. Women like it because it is light and easy to carry.

Wrists Tell Glove Story

WITH gloves with the narrow, fitted wrist are very smart, wider wrists and the gauntlet types will be worn with many suit costumes. Fitting is, however, essential, and double insertions, bands and other trimming devices are used to give the snug wristline smart this year.

Ribbed Fabrics New in Berets

BERETS FIND new interest in ribbed fabrics, and the new soft-ly ribbed or braided straws that lend themselves to this styling. Their simplicity recommends them to everyone, old or young, for wear with many different costumes.

What to Choose In Neckwear

FABRIC LACE or net, too, gives the right touch to the tight suit, and may be chosen in high frilly or tailored neckwear.

Vivid Prints Glow In Many Hues

PRINTS are just about as brilliant as they can be. The narrow, long, low neckline and the sash belt mark the new frocks, which also have skirt, puffed sleeves, and skirts that are of the swing type. With these details, the prints should be daring, and they are.

Challis prints, or silk, also are popular. In the gay vivid designs, the flower clusters are widely defined. For evening, large, vivid florals are in demand.

New Spring Suits Are Charming

THE NEW suits are charming, being both smart and youthful. Pastel colors, with vivid accents, will be seen quite a bit this spring. Jackets are shorter; some of them are waist-length models, with a link button and long, rolling lapels. Such a suit is done in heather pink tweed, with a blouse of pleated, raspberry red chiffon. Gray with yellow is a color combination that is popular.

One gray tweed, with tiny yellow flecks, has a blouse of matching yellow linen.

Socialites Ready for Easter

Rain or Shine, Gay Costumes To Be In Parade

By BETTY ALDEN

THE DECREES OF the creators of fashion in Paris, New York and Hollywood are awaited and obeyed by millions of women in every city of the civilized world . . . Adrian raises an eyebrow and hats tilt upward . . . Schiaparelli droops a langurous Russian eyelid and skirts go down . . . and so it is with Molyneux, Vionnet, Elizabeth Hawes and all the rest . . .

Miss Cornelia Pentecost

They form a legislature on style, restricted by no Supreme Court . . . Their every fancy becomes law to a thousand willing slaves in every place but one—the office of the weather man . . .

Here diplomacy, money, pleading, coercion have been to no avail and if costumes for the Easter Parade are designed to be soft, silky and spring-like of warm, tailored and tweedy, Easter bonnets are to dawn with a hidden sky and shifty winds blowing up Commonwealth avenue . . . very bright and warm, or any other way to be just the opposite from what is expected . . .

AS THE WEATHER has been all topsy turvy this year, forsighted women, especially in New England, are taking all possibilities into consideration and are selecting both spring-like prints with redingotes, and cosy tweed suits, and are even making a point of keeping their galoshes, furs and umbrellas out of the cedar chest in case of an emergency . . .

Mrs. James M. Sewall, Jr. hopes to discover a bright sunny day when she pulls her beautiful curtains aside to peer expectantly out on Easter Morning . . . she is prepared with a redingote of white rep consisting of a black silk dress printed with clusters of royal blue and chartreuse flowers . . . the flowers in the print will take actual form in the clusters which ornament the neckline . . . this idea of having artificial flowers exactly duplicating those in the print is one of the new notes . . . over this she wears a tweed coat of soft black wool, buttoned down the front . . .

SHOULD AN EAST wind be blowing in over Marblehead harbor toward Mrs. Paul D. Bost, Jr.'s, new home, she can sally forth feeling snug and warm, as well as looking very alluring, in her deep burgundy wool suit with its longish coat which has a wide border of platinum fox down the front and around the hem . . . Her hat for the ensemble is a small wine colored turban and her shoes plain brown pumps . . .

If Mrs. Stedman Hanks wears her furs she will probably add a springlike touch to her costume with a Roman striped turban we have seen her wear on special occasions . . . a bit of velvet or taffeta and tilts to a becoming angle, discloing all one side of her head and the fresh hair gray hair in a smart coiffure . . .

THE BRUNSWICK style is being enthusiastically adopted again this season by sporty women . . . . . one of the most colorful choices is Mrs. David Bloss's wine red wool coat which is buttoned from neck to hem over a unique dress of wool . . . the back of the dress is wine and the front chartreuse green, although the Harlequin combination exists that the colors change with the seams . . . the dress has quite simple lines with a straight high collar and short sleeves . . . A little fabric but of wine wool and brown pumps complete this costume . . . Betty Gibson, has planned her wardrobe around a tailored cotton gay pattern with touches of white satin shirt, silver bows, gabardine pumps, and white gloves, but mature, will becomes soft and feminine in accordance with the mode . . .

MRS. GUY WARREN WALKER, the former Dorothea Foden Brown, has worn her Easter suit to several Art Exhibits . . . it is fashioned of navy wool with a matching cape and fabric hat . . . a color which is very effective with her snowy white hair . . . Mrs. C. Tracy Barnes's new suit is a navy tailored wool with soft pink jersey blouse with which her model in a recent fashion show . . .

One of the costumes which is being hidden away for its first public appearance on Easter Sunday is a startling chartreuse ensemble trimmed with platinum fox, and a chartreuse pulled hem felt bound in gray . . . We won't spoil the surprise by disclosing the identity of its owner but she is pretty tall with auburn locks and will certainly wear the suit to best advantage . . .

ALL OF THE SMART new creations now offered in the shops will not be seen in the Easter Parade . . . Many will be worn in the evening or at some distant resort like Bermuda or Palm Beach . . . Arnold Scaasi man has an apple green organza evening gown with rows of stiffening around the skirt . . .

Fashion Juries

TWO JURIES of socially prominent women have judged the spring fashions presented in this section in sessions at the French Room of the Ritz Carlton, and have awarded them the recognition of the Fashion Congress of America . . .

On March 10 the following served: Mrs. Nicholas Danforth, chairman; Mrs. Alfred H. B. Peabody, Mrs. Hamilton Heard, Mrs. Whitfield Painter, Mrs. Calvert Magruder, Mrs. John Whiting, Mrs. Palfrey Perkins, Mrs. Dudley P. Rannes, Mrs. Benjamin Goodale, Mrs. Nathaniel Goodhue, Mrs. Charles E. Kinkade and Mrs. Robert Emmons.

On March 17 Mrs. Francis G. Shaw, Jr., acted as chairman with the following on her committee: Mrs. Lewis Beal, Mrs. Melvin Johnson, Jr., Mrs. Richard Stetson, Mrs. William Shearer, 3rd, Mrs. Thomas Urny, Miss Elizabeth Wheeler, Mrs. Walter Wyeth, Mrs. Robert Miller, Miss Marion Duane and Mrs. Edward Bland.

Dorothy Perkins' new dance frock is Bonnymeil blue chiffon with a bolero covered with colorful petals of chiffon, and intricate straps which come to the center front of the neckline . . . Dorothea Perkins left for Bermuda last week with a bonnet of white linen straw tucked in her luggage . . . it is made with an open crown to wear with summery dresses . . . When she sailed she wore a tricky black suit hat of a very narrow brim and a crimson rose with green stems shooting upward on the right side . . . Her sister, Mary, looks very trim and pretty as she goes about her Easter shopping in a golden brown gabardine coat with a brown felt hat trimmed with yellow belting ribbon which hangs down in short ends at the back of the brim . . .

Another hat that caught our eye was Isabella Gardner's navy silk turban made of rows of tubing . . . and Mrs. Allen Forbes' black silk jersey turban is very chic . . . For her Bermuda cruise Betsy Shrigley has selected a wide brimmed white hat of rough straw . . . it is worn high off-the-face . . .

Sweaters Are Gayly Tyrolean

EMBROIDERED effects endless, many of the spring knits, particularly blouse tops or sweaters. Gay Tyrolean or other peasant designs and bright colors make them welcome contrast from the monotones of other resort borders, bright collars or belts, amusing high-placed sashes, and novel buttons add interest.

Step Out in 1937 Sandals

SANDALS PROMISE to be leaders in day or evening. Wide straps in hi-built lines as well as low cut open vera sandals are worn. Open toe sandals will be worn, and fit and look better in the newer 1937 styles.

Lower heels appear throughout the mode, especially in spectator and novelty sports shoes.

Getting a Line On Skirt Styles

SKIRTS ARE along the straighter lines, whether softly pleated, or made in more tailored fashion. Pockets add a decorative touch, and tie or belt may brighten up the entire costume. In fact, a dash of color in accessories is often need to dress up the casual suit, whether it be a pleated blouse, or a bright patent leather bag or gay little felt hat.

Capes Suggest Military Trend

LITTLE CAPES and small shoulder effects are used on coats to suggest the military trend. Many coats have the padded or exaggerated shoulders of the cavalryman's coat, so popular this season, with its double-breasted styling and simple military lines.

Newest Skirts Have Cuff Hems

NEW YORK fashion notes reveal that several recent arrivals in Paris and Bridal Shops were found quite suits with skirts finished with a cuff at the bottom. This gives the skirt a "manish" and shorter effect and achieves a clean cut definite line.
